

The Magnetometer in the Basement

Not only are individual minds connected, but apparently everything is connected. This includes places and things.

Here is the data regarding Ingo Swann:

Prior to Swann's visit I arranged for access to a well-shielded magnetometer used in a quark-detection experiment in the Physics Department at Stanford University. During our visit to this laboratory, sprung as a surprise to Swann, [we asked him] to perturb the operation of the magnetometer, located in a vault below the floor of the building and shielded by mu-metal shielding, an aluminum container, copper shielding and a superconducting shield. To the astonishment of Stanford physics professor Dr. Arthur Hebard, whose experiment depended heavily on the magnetometer's much vaunted imperturbability to outside influence, Swann doubled the rate at which the magnetic field in the magnetometer was decaying. Then, in response to Hebard's disbelieving subsequent request, Swann stopped the field change altogether for a period of roughly forty-five seconds. As if to add insult to injury, he then went on to "remote view" the interior of the apparatus... by drawing a reasonable facsimile of its rather complex (and heretofore unpublished) construction.

That visit with Swann initiated a twenty-four-year, $20 million research project sponsored first by the CIA, then the Defense Intelligence Agency, and eventually transferred from SRI to Science Applications International Corporation (SAIC) in 1991. [40]

Additional information regarding this event is given in Appendix 1.6.

The magnetometer incident shows that it is possible to use intentional thought to view selected areas of space. This was also seen in the case of the missing harp above. In this magnetometer incident, intentional thought also was shown to affect matter which had been shielded heavily against electromagnetic radiation and also against penetration by every other physical possibility known. Other experiments have also shown effects on matter caused by intentional thought.
